DRESDEN.

Dresden perhaps takes its name from Drjezdjenje, meaning the dwellers in a swampy forest village; was probably settled by the Sorb Vandals, where the Frauenkirche now is being the nucleus. Its neighborhood was doubtless fortified before 1200 A. D. In 1216 it is mentioned as a city or town.

Since 1485 it has been the residence of the Albertine royal line; was greatly embellished under Augustus II and III. Historical events which took place at Dresden are: Peace of Dresden (December 25th, 1745); Victory of Napoleon over the Bohemian army (August 26th and 27th, 1813); Fight on the barricades (May 3rd to 9th, 1849); Dresden Conference (December 23rd, 1850 to May 15th, 1851).

Dresden, the capital of the Kingdom of Saxony, called the "Elbe Florence", is situated on both banks of the Elbe, which is navigable from Hamburg up as far as Leitmeritz in Bohemia. The right side (going down stream) comprises the Neustadt with its suburbs, Antonstadt, Leipziger Vorstadt and Albertstadt; the left side the Altstadt, including the American and English, the so-called Russian, the Swiss and the Bavarian "quarters".

Owing to its charming situation and its valuable collections (the finest of which is the splendid picture gallery), it has become one of the most attractive of European capitals. It is one of the roomiest cities in the world. The present building laws are very stringent, allowing in certain quarters only villas, and nowhere permitting the erection, in any street, of a building higher than the street is wide. The principal streets are 40 metres = 131 feet wide, and the new side streets 20 metres. It presents to strangers the impression of being "larger inside than out". It counts now over 500,000 inhabitants, and boasts of an always augmenting English and American colony, to the tastes of which officials and trades people pay especial attention. The city lies 110 metres = 361 ft. above the sea. Mean annual temperature about 12° C. = 53,6° F. = 9½° R.

MANUFACTURES.

Dresden and its immediate vicinity are a very active industrial centre. The principal manufactures are: cigarettes, chocolate and bonbons, straw braid, artificial flowers, and feather ornaments. The King Albert harbor affords good loading and unloading facilities. Yearly 4000 boats go up stream and 4000 boats and rafts down stream; placing the Elbe first in rank among German rivers in this particular.

CITY DIVISIONS.

The Elbe practically divides the town into two portions, although five bridges make good communication between them. Besides these two grand divisions there are minor and more merely nominal sub-divisions.

West of Altstadt proper is the Wilsdruffer Vorstadt (Industrial); further west, beyond the railway viaduct, Friedrichstadt, 200 years old.

East of Altstadt proper is the Pirnaische Vorstadt; east of the latter, the Johann-Vorstadt and Striesen; south-east, Strehlen. South are the See- and the Süd-Vorstädte.

The English quarter lies in the Seevorstadt, north of the railway and east of Pragerstrasse.

The American and Bavarian quarters are south of the railway and east of Reichsstrasse; the Swiss quarter south of the railway and west of Reichsstrasse; these two constituting the Südvorstadt.

Neustadt proper was nearly wiped out by fire in 1685, Hauptstrasse and Königstrasse, built after this, owe their beauty to Augustus the Strong. The eastern part of Neustadt was once nearly covered by military establishments—now supplanted by finer ones in the Albertstadt and elsewhere; their site being now a fine residence quarter.

Antonstadt is north and east of Neustadt, and separated therefrom by a broad belt of villas marking the site of the former fortifications. It was originally a Bohemian settlement or quarter.

The Leipziger Vorstadt lies west of Neustadt. Pieschen is north of this. The Albertstadt, on a hill on the Neustadt side, north-east, is a military settlement over  $1\frac{1}{2}$  miles long.

RAILWAYS AND DEPOTS.

(Bahnhöfe.)

Dresden has four railway stations.

In Altstadt: (1) Hauptbahnhof (K 14) for trains to and from Saxon Switzerland, Tetschen-Bodenbach, Prague and Vienna, Tharandt, Freiberg, Chemnitz, Reichenbach and Hof; Berlin via Röderau; Leipzig, Meissen &c.; (2) Berliner or Friedrichstädter Bahnhof (G 10) in Friedrichstadt (Berlinerstr.) for direct trains to Berlin via Zossen; Wettiner Bahnhof, Könneritz and Wettinerstrasse (J 10) near the market house. (Fast trains do not stop here.) The Hauptbahnhof is one of the finest in Europe; with its approaches it cost 85 million marks.

In Neustadt: (4) Neustädter Bahnhof (L, M 8) (Grossenhainerstr.) for Leipzig and for Berlin via Röderau and Elsterwerda. There are many "shuttle" trains connecting this with the Hauptbahnhof.

Both first-class and second-class droschkys and Dienstmen or Gepäckträger are in attendance at all stations. Special officials at the exit doors give checks ("Droschkenmarke") for which 10 Pf. must be paid, indicating which droschky is to be taken. These officials wear blue caps with gold band.

The railway porters in the station are not allowed to carry baggage to hotels or other destinations outside the station; for this purpose the outside "dienstmen" must be engaged. Their tariff is given on page 9.

Porters from the principal hotels are also in waiting.

Cook's Tourist Office Pragerstrasse 43.

A. Kohn's Tourist Office Christianstr. 31.

ROUND TRIP TICKETS.

(Rundreise-Billets.)

Cheap tickets for routes selected by the traveller (no free baggage) to be had in the Osthalle, Hauptbahnhof.

STEAMBOATS.

(Dampfer.)

There are two lines of fast river steamers with about 40 boats on the Elbe. Upstream boats leave the Terrassenufer, foot of Brühl'sche Terrasse (L 11) for Loschwitz and Blasewitz, for Pirna 8 to 10 trips; Wehlen*), Rathen*), Königstein (Saxon Switzerland) 6 to 7 trips; Tetschen and Aussig Bohemia) 5 to 7 trips. They touch at Karlstrasse, Neustadt.

Downstream boats leaving also on Terrassenufer, depart for Meissen 9 times and to and from Riesa 4 times daily. Mühlberg-Strehla 3 times.

There are first- and second-class cabins. On deck first- and second-class passengers have precisely the same accommodations, except that the former are covered with a canopy which makes the first-class deck-places sometimes less enjoyable than the second.

Some of the boats are double-deckers, and are to be preferred. In Summer there are "concert boats" daily in the afternoon, which go up stream beyond Pillnitz and return; these do not make local landings.

Detailed time-tables are printed.

The rates are about half those by rail.

First-class monthly tickets (not transferrable) M. 20 for the first member, M. 12 for the other members of a family for the whole trip from Leitmeritz-Dresden-Mühlberg.

Season tickets between M. 35 and 85 according to the distances. Subscription tickets (10 to 20 in number) at reduces prices. (Children  $\frac{2}{3}$  of the price.)

The scenery, except between Pirna and Pillnitz, is beautiful.

Going upstream one notes especially the villas of Loschwitz; the King's Summer or pleasure palace at Pillnitz; the old castle Sonnenstein (now an asylum) at Pirna; the sandstone rocks of Wehlen, Rathen and Schandau and the fortress of Königstein, with the Lilienstein nearly apposite.

Going downstream, one is attracted by the Lössnitz vineyards, the hills of Siebeneichen, Spaar- and Hirschstein and the *) Landings for the Bastei.

STEAMBOAT-FARES.

(Children up to 3 years, free; 3 to 14, lower prices.)

The "direction" signs are changed at the end of each trip.

The Haltestellen or stopping places of each line are indicated by red street signs respectively.

Tramway time-tables can be purchased for 10 Pf. and are desirable, because towards the last trip alternate cars in some lines do not go to the terminal indicated by the signs, but to the car-barns.

Monthly, quarterly or yearly (untransferrable) season tickets may be purchased for any, or for all lines; and are to be recommended when one makes the same ride at least once in each direction, daily.

GALLERIES AND COLLECTIONS.

(Galerien und Sammlungen.)

The days and hours when the various collections are open for public inspection, and the tariff of admission, exhibit a maddening complication. With the help, however, of the time table covering pages 18 and 19, and of the memoranda under the description of each, the visitor should be spared vexation and disappointment.

Visitors to the museums have to leave their canes and umbrellas with the porter. The wardrobe and other attendants in the various royal collections are forbidden to receive fees. German and English catalogues mostly sold at the entrance and at Tittmann's bookstore, Pragerstrasse 19.

THE ZWINGER (K L 11).

The Zwinger was built in 1711—32 by Pöppelmann for the festivals of the pleasure-loving King August II. It took its name from the former Zwinger or prison of the city wall. The work was begun with the west or wall side, where Permoser's "Hercules" is the principal decoration; went next to the south side with its towered entrance arch. The north side was for a long time an ordinary painted wall. The ceiling paintings of the four corner buildings were by Fehling, Pellegrini and de Silvestre; but only Pellegrini's Olympus, in the Mathematical Saloon, remains. The great hall of the Mathematical Saloon and the northwest pavilion of the Picture Gallery (Rooms R, S) show the original beautiful internal marble decoration. The Diana bath or Nymphenbad, in the northwest corner of the building, is left in picturesque disorder.

The building, which was also to serve as an orangery and for the collections, was devoted to the latter purpose in 1727.

The original appearance of the Zwinger can be seen in the Gallery, in Canaletto's pictures.

In the upper hall of the south-west pavilion there are remains of the former marble construction, and gilded brackets and the ceiling decoration of de Silvestre.

The Picture Gallery.

rivalled only by the Louvre and the gallery of Florence, and well known all over the world, contains rare master-pieces, especially of the Dutch and Italian schools. Raphael's Madonna ("di San Sisto" or "Sistine") is perhaps the finest picture in the world.

Sundays and feast days 11—2; Mondays 9—1 in summer, 10—2 in winter; other days 9—5 in summer, 10—3 in winter.

The Museum building was begun in 1847 on Semper's plans; finished in 1854 after Haenel's and Krüger's. The style is the Italian renaissance. Among the sculptural decorations note Haenel's and Krüger's "Ancient Art" on the Theaterplatz side, and "Modern Art" on the Zwinger side. The entrance on the Zwinger side is especially fine; note Haenel's Raphael and Michel Angelo; under the first, Siegfried and Judith; under the second, St. George and Samson; above, to left, Giotto and Holbein; to right, Dürer and Cornelius; at the left side Dante, at the right Goethe.

In the entrance hall is a plaster frieze, (by Knauer and Schilling) showing Modern Art.

The Picture Gallery contained in 1902 2229 oil and tempera pictures of the old school, (up to the beginning of the 19th century) and 333 of more recent date; 187 pastels, 220 miniatures, and 12 tapestries; in all 2981. Since then there have been some additions.

As far as arrangement and cataloguing is concerned, the collection is divided into three main portions:—(I) that for "antique" oil paintings (up to the end of the eighteenth century) (II) that for "new" oil paintings (since the beginning of the nineteenth century) and (III) that for pastels, miniatures and woven tapestries. Each of the first two divisions is further classified according to the nationality of the "school" to which it belongs; the third is divided under the three headings designating the character of the works of art. In each of the grand divisions the pictures are as far as possible arranged chronologically. In the first floor and northwest of the main cupola are the Italian and French schools: southeast the Spanish, Flemish, Hollandish and German schools. The entire second floor is kept for pictures of the 19th century; the parterre rooms of the northwest wings for the oldest Italian and a few less important later Italian works; the southeast parterre rooms for oil paintings of the 18th century and for pastels and miniatures.

Royal Palace

(Königliches Schloss, L 11).

The Schloss should be entered by the larger of the two courts (on the west side of which are the Green Vault and the Coin Cabinet). This court attained its present dimensions in 1551, under Kurfürst Moritz. Three of the staircase-towers, and the four-story loggia before the tower were then built. The reliefs under the loggia parterre show scenes from the life of Joshua. The upper part of the great tower was finished 1676. Under Kurfürst Johann Georg III (1680—1691) the Green Gate was built. After the fire of 1701, which destroyed the wing lying towards the Schlossstrasse, and containing the „Giant Salon” the Schloss was in 1718 largely rebuilt. The new façades date from 1890—99.

The Schloss tower is the highest in Saxony (101 metres = 331 ft.).

The principal rooms to see in the Schloss are the Chapel in the first story, the Audience Room, Dining Room, New Banquet Hall, Great or “Parade” Audience Chamber and Throne Room in the second.

The Silver Plate collection is to be visited from Monday until Saturday, 9—1 and 4—6; Sunday 11—12; admission, 1 or two persons, 1.50 M., up to six persons 3.50 M.

It once contained 1500 alabaster statues, but in the siege of 1760 most of these were ruined or removed by the Prussians. There are three main avenues; (1) the Hercules Allee, characterized by two colossal statuary groups at the entrance; (2) the Hauptallee, at the entrance of which are two large marble vases showing the four seasons and the four quarters of the earth, by Corradini; (3) the Querallee. Where this crosses the Hauptallee is the Royal-Palace, now used as a museum for the collections of the Verein für sächsische Volkskunde, built by Karger. At the foot of the stair-case the statues of Herkules with the boy Telephorus and Silen with Bacchus by Corradini. ## BOARDING AND LODGING

(See A B C-Guide).

Most of the boarding- and lodging-houses and furnished rooms are in the S.E. quarter. Many of the former ("Pensions") have signs to indicate their presence; rooms to let are shown by modest bills on the houses. Visitors not in a hurry, and intending residents, are recommended to consult the daily Anzeiger, or to put an advertisement therein or in the "Dresden Daily".

Furnished rooms to let are advertised each day in the Anzeiger; and advertisements therefore may be left at its office near the S.E., corner of Altmarkt, or at the Invalidendank, 5, See-strasse (before 2 P.M. for the next morning's paper).

To prevent overcharges and difficulty:

1) Have it definitely understood that lodgings are taken for only one fortnight, or month (never longer than a month) ahead; that will obviate the necessity of giving a month's notice in advance. In other words, give the advance notice when hiring, and renew it each month, before a witness, or better yet have the notice acknowledged on your receipt.

2) Get a written memorandum of the price of everything: lodging, service, light, heat, breakfast, &c. separately; or if you pay a lump sum have the items for which you pay definitely specified in writing.

3) Inspect the furniture &c. carefully, and point out any damage which you see, lest it be charged for in the bill.

The foregoing cautions are no more applicable to Dresden than to other European cities—(perhaps less so than in countries inhabited by the Latin races)—but there is "human nature" everywhere, and honest people never object to accuracy and attention to detail in business dealings.

CHURCHES.

All Saints' Church (Wienerstrasse, L 14), built in 1868, consecrated by the Bishop of Cumberland 1869. The ground for this beautiful "13th-century Gothic" or "Early English" edifice was given by the city and the expenses of the building were met by Mrs. Goschen and her sons. The fine altar-windows, costing 30,000 M. present scenes from the life of Christ (the Baptism, Temptation, Gethsemane, Christ before the Pilate, and the Resurrection, in two windows). Celebration of the Holy Communion, at 8 A.M.; Morning service with sermon at 11 A.M., Evensong with sermon at 6 P.M.—Matins daily at 8 A.M., on Wednesday and Friday with Litany.—Chaplain: Rev. C. A. Moore, Strehlennerstrasse 21, II.

American Church of St. John (Reichsplatz, K 16), built 1884, opened Christmas of the same year, is a tasteful Gothic building with a fine Rectory adjoining; the funds being furnished by the Congregation.—Protestant Episcopal Divine Service every Sunday at 11 A.M.—Evening prayer at 5 P.M.—Holy Communion the first Sunday in every month.—Rev. John F. Butterworth, Rector, Reichsplatz 5.—The Rector is "at home" on Wednesday afternoons. There is a Chapter of St. Andrew's Brotherhood and a branch of the King's Daughters attached to the parish.

Church of Scotland (K 14, Presbyterian Service), Bernhardstrasse 2.—Divine Service at 11 A.M. and 6 P.M.—Communion on the first Sunday in the month.—Rev. T. H. Wright, Minister. Resides in the same building.

The Royal Catholic Church (Katholische Hofkirche, Schlossplatz, L 11), connected with the Royal castle, is a magnificent edifice; built in 1739—56 in the reign of Augustus III by Chiaveri. The steeple is 85 metres = 279 feet high. The exterior of the building is beautifully ornamented with 64 stone statues of the Saints after designs of Torelli. Each of them cost 1500 M. The chief portal has the colossal figures of the four Evangelists (each costing 2250 M.) and the Virgin with the Child Jesus. The interior of the church is rich in magnificent paintings. The altarpiece represents the Ascension, painted by Raphael Mengs. The paintings over the side-altar show the death of St. Xavier and the Virgin's appearance to Loyola, both by Rotari. The Benno Chapel is adorned with pictures by Torelli, representing scenes from the life of the Bishop of Meissen. The two marble statues by Berini are John the Baptist and St. Magdalen.—The excellent organ is the last work of Silbermann. On Sunday and on holy days at 11 A.M., high mass with exquisite sacred music and singing.

The Sophienkirche, (L 11, Evangelical court church) dates from 1351 and was first a place of worship of the Grey Brethren; before the Reformation it was used as a ware-house. In 1602 it was restored by the Electress Sophie, and 1864—68 entirely renovated in the Gothic style by Prof. Arnold, and furnished with two new steeples, 67 metres = 220 feet high. On the south-side is a relief by Gust. Kietz. The interior contains many fine statues and objects of interest, and an altar on two pillars of green marble, hewn from a single block, brought by Duke Albrecht from Palestine. Fine organ. Behind the church stands the elegant Georgsbrunnen, erected 1886 after Hähnel's and Möckel's designs.

Kreuzkirche, (L 12), dating from the 12th century, so called from a relic (a splint of the Cross of Christ). Entirely destroyed by Prussian bombardment (1760), it was restored after the plan of Schmidt; was greatly beautified and changed in 1894/95. Burned out 1897 and entirely rebuilt inside; Dresden's first principal church, and interiorly the most beautiful and modern in the entire city. The organ, the ceilings, the opalescent windows, the reading-desk, are well worth examination.—From the steeple (96 metres = 315 feet) high, beautiful view. (Door "B"); guide at 11, 3, and 6 o'clock, 25 Pf. Every Saturday "Vespers" (sacred music) from 2 to 3 P.M.

Frauenkirche (M 11), the oldest church in Dresden (time of "August der Starke"), was rebuilt in the Renaissance-style 1726—1745 by Bähr. (The interior is Barock.) Consecrated 1734. Cost 1,200,000 M. 1760 the Prussian cannon-balls rebounded from the lofty dome without injuring it. The church suggests St. Peter's, Rome, and the Florence cathedral. It is the largest church in Dresden and can hold 5000 persons. The steeple, 100 meters = 328 feet high, affords a grand prospect over the city and its environs. The organ, containing 44 registers and 2667 pipes, is the best work of Silbermann. Under the church are interesting old vaults. Every Saturday, vespers 4 P.M.

Annenkirche (K 12) built 1578 by the city and the Electress Anna; burnt 1760 by the Prussian bombardment; rebuilt 1763—69; furnished with two towers 1821/23. The altar is from the Kreuzkirche of 1768, injured by the Prussian bombardment. Behind the church, monument to „Mutter Anna" († 1585).

The beautiful Johanneskirche, in Gothic-Roman style, by Möckel. (Corner of Pillnitzer- and Eliasstrasse, O 12).

Russian Church (Reichsstrasse, near the American church, K 15) in old Russian style after the design of v. Bosse. The interior displays great costliness: especially remarkable are the windows representing the Ascension of Christ.

Catholic Church (Pfarrkirche, Hauptstrasse, near the Albert Theatre, Neustadt, M 9) with beautiful representations of the Passion of Christ. Roman style; two towers; built 1852—53.

Trinitatiskirche (Prot.), Gerokstrasse, (formerly part of Blaserstrasse; Q 11) has fine bells.

Dresden has model accommodations for over 15,000 soldiers mostly in Neustadt or rather in the Albertstadt. Take cars to Arsenal. Entry to barracks of "Kaiser Wilhelm" and "König Albert" regiments guarded by fine lions, by Schilling, cast from French cannons. Kadettenhaus and Garrison Hospital (Lazarett)

have fine buildings. Note Mausoleum of late Minister von Fabrice. Over the bridge the new Garrison Church; further to Königsplatz and Arsenal. At end of Carola-Allee, the Pionier-Kaserne; further on the Schützen-Kaserne. Following the Königsbrückerstrasse, to the city workhouse; then the Military Courts, the Commissary and Quartermaster's Buildings, and the Military Washhouse. In the Commissary Department there is an abattoir, a coal-yard, a steam flour-mill with a capacity of 50,000 lbs. of flour daily, and a steam bakery. The grain store-house has a capacity of 500 tons; the flour store-house, the same.

Going back through the Königsbrückerstrasse to Prinz Georg-Allee, across the railway, we find at the right the Riding-school with barracks, and stabling for 160 horses; then the Cavalry, Train and Artillery Barracks, each having its own riding school.

These buildings &c. cost 15,000,000 marks. (Architects Niess & Rümpel.) The entire frontage of these barracks is about 3000 metres, or  $1\frac{7}{8}$  mile. The Mausoleum of the late Minister of War General Fabrice is imposing and graceful (P 6).

BRIDGES (Brücken).

The Elbe is spanned by six bridges at or near Dresden:

The principal one was the stone Augustusbrücke, built 1222 by Matthäus Fotius, and having the unexplained peculiarity that the cut-waters or ice-breakers on the piers are on the down-stream side. (L 10, 11.) Being rather unsafe, it is being replaced by a new one which obstructs the river less. The old bridge had 402 metres = 1319 feet long and 17 metres = 58 feet wide; there were 16 arches, through only 11 of which the Elbe usually flowed. The depth of water was shown on the third pier, counting from the Altstadt end. It has been destroyed in 1907 und 1908, and is replaced for the time being by an Interims-bridge. The new bridge will probably be innovated towards the end of the year.

The Marienbrücke runs from the Viaduct to the Palace Garden; and consisted formerly of two parts; a foot and wagon road (not for street cars) and a 3-track railway bridge, at a higher level; but a new 4-track railway bridge has been built along the old railway part and is now thrown open to ordinary vehicles, to street cars, and to foot passengers. (K 9). It is 231 metres = 758 feet long and 20 metres = 65 feet wide and has 12 arches, 6 of which are in the stream.

The Albertbrücke, (stone) runs from Sachsenplatz to Kurfürstenplatz (N 10). Length 316 metres = 1036 feet, width 18 metres = 59 feet.

The Carolabrücke, of iron and stone, was completed in 1896 (M 10, 11). It connects Elbberg and the Neustadt river bank (new Finanz Ministerium). This bridge is 16 metres = 54 feet wide and 327 metres = 1063 feet long; 188 metres = 617 feet lie over the river.

The iron "rigid suspension" bridge between Loschwitz and Blasewitz is the only one of its type in the world. As regards strength it reflects great credit on its designer, Prof. Dr. Geheimer Finanzrat Köpcke.

On all bridges, the law requires both foot-passengers and vehicles to keep to the right side.

TIPS

Most foreigners give either too much or too little "Trinkgeld" to waiters, conductors, cabmen &c.

It may be considered safe to give a cabman one tenth of the regular fare, extra; that is, 10 Pf. for a one-mark fare; the minimum being 10 Pf. (except in case of negligence or impudence, when none should be given). To waiters (a tip is in almost all cases due) a tenth of the bill, (with a minimum of 5 Pf., as for a glass of beer). To street-car conductors, 5 Pf. for one to three persons; (not really necessary).

MINOR SIGHTS.

Arnold's and Richler's Art Exhibitions, Schlossstrasse, corner of Sporergasse; and Pragerstrasse 9.

The Panoramas.

PURCHASES

For those refer to the A B C-Guide, page 71, which gives a number of good and trustworthy shops and firms.

In paying, where you give a note or piece, out of which to receive change, state the amount as you lay it down; as sometimes dishonest clerks or waiters pretend to have received less than was the case. Sometimes, also, with unfamiliar money, you may think that you have handed over more than you have.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

A WALK THROUGH THE CITY.*

Altstadt.

The Altmarkt (L 12) with the imposing monument in Carrara marble of the "Sieges-Denkmal", which represents the victorious Germania with four emblematical figures, signifying Valor, Peace, Patriotism, and Science. This was modelled by Robert Hentze in Dresden, done by Raffaello Cellai in Florence and unveiled September 1st 1880. —The old Town-Hall (Rathaus) with a small tower is opposite.

Through the Schlossstrasse pass the Royal Palace (Kgl. Schloss), an ancient irregular edifice with three courts. It was built in 1530—1535 by Duke George; is connected by a bridge with the Catholic Hofkirche. The newer portions are connected with the old by bridges across the street. It has recently been quite handsomely restored, inside and out. Visitors must apply to the Schlossverwalter for admission. The steeple is 112 metres = 367 feet high. In the first court to the left is the Green vault (Grünes Gewölbe). Through the Georgentor (built 1530), the last remnant of the ancient castle of this name, you reach from Schlossstrasse the Schlossplatz. The interior of the palace is well worth seeing, especially the ball-room and the coronation-hall in the second floor; the walls of which are beautifully adorned with paintings by Bendemann. The ball-room is decorated with mythological figures; in the coronation-hall are portraits of eminent law-givers as Moses, Solon, Zoroaster, Numa, Charlemagne, Otto I., Barbarossa, Rudolph I., &c. Above the throne are four allegorical figures of the cardinal virtues: Justice, Wisdom, Fortitude, and Moderation. The Silberkammer contains the King's plate. (May be seen 9—1 A. M. and 4—6 P. M. at a charge of 1<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>—3<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub> M.) On the "Schlossplatz" is the new King Albert Monument by Prof. Baumbach, Berlin.

* Almost all the objects of interest the names of which are here given receive separate notice under appropriate headings. See Alphabetical Index at beginning of this work, page V.

To the right (East) is the Brühl'sche Terrasse (L 11), rising above the Elbe with a charming view of the river and the distant heights. The views of the Lössnitz highland, (N) the Dresdner Heide, the Waldschlösschen and Saloppe (E) are fine. Formerly it was the garden of Count Brühl, minister of Augustus III. Before that it was part of the fortifications, and is now the only part of these, standing. The broad flight of 41 steps, built 1814 by the Russian governor, leading up to the platform, was formerly decorated with four gilded statues by Schilling, representing Morning, Noon, Evening, and Night. These received the first prize at the Vienna Exhibition of 1869. The promenade, a quarter of a mile long, is the Rendezvous of the fashionable world in Dresden. To the right is the old Academy of Art Building, renewed 1897 and now used as a library and for an engraving collection; then comes the new one (Rietschel's monument by Schilling (1876) is to the left) and the Albertinum*, then the new Art Exhibition Building with an iron and glass dome, and the Semper Monument; then the Belvédère, built on the old Jungfernbastion, and used as a concert-room and restaurant and for balls, &c. From it one sees the Elbe and its bridges, Neustadt, Loschwitz, and the Heide. The view of the Lössnitz from here is most beautiful.

Behind the Catholic church is the Theaterplatz (L 11) with the New Court Theatre (Opera) a superb edifice built in 1871 to 1878 in the renaissance-style (by Semper). Opened Feb. 2, 1879, with "Iphigenia". The colossal rotunda is surmounted by the Panther Quadriga by Schilling, representing Dionysos and Ariadne. At the entrance are the statues of Goethe and Schiller by Rietschel. The interior has beautiful paintings in the ceiling and in the foyers, displaying great profusion of colour. Main curtain by Keller of Karlsruhe. Central gaselier has 258 jets. The Auditorium holds about 2000 persons. Royal lodge, centre of first rank. Stage 43 feet wide, with arrangements for four curtains. Building cost four million marks. Strangers desirous of inspecting the machinery &c. can apply to the custodian, 16, Schössergasse.

The King John Monument is on the Theaterplatz. Equestrian Statue by Schilling (in memory of the Wettin-Jubilee in 1889).

Facing the theatre is the Zwinger (K L 11), built in 1711 by Pöppelmann in the reign of Augustus the Strong. It is a large building encircling garden beds and the bronze-monument of Frederick Augustus the Just by Rietschel. On its base are four allegorical figures of Piety, Wisdom, Justice, and Clemency. The edifice itself consists of six pavilions, partly in rococo, partly in baroque style, unique in construction. King Augustus intended to make it a grand portico of the main Castle, which was never built. At present it serves the purpose of a museum (see "Museums" pages 18—36).

Passing the Sophienkirche and the Georgenbrunnen you come to the Postplatz (K 11). In a line with this rises St. Anne's Church, near which is a Statue of "Mutter Anna", the consort of Augustus I. From the General Post-office and Telegraph continue your way along the Wilsdrufferstrasse. Straight on is the splendid König-Johann-Strasse, from which runs the Johann-Georgen-Allee (formerly Johannesplatz) with rich buildings directly to the Grosser Garten. This brings you back to the Altmarkt (L 12); by keeping to the right you reach the Seestrasse with the Foreign-Departement and the new Bismarck Monument by Dietz. At this corner is the Victoriahaus, designed after the Braunschweig Gewandhaus of 1590 (German Renaissance style). Straight on is the Pragerstrasse, a broad street with beautiful shops; at the end of this street is the Haupt-Bahnhof (K 14). Passing under the railway you come to the Bismarckplatz (Russian-American quarter) with the Polytechnikum or Technical High School built in 1874 after a design of Prof. Heyne, and since much enlarged (K 15). First rate professors for mechanics, architecture, mathematics and chemistry. Foreign students admitted. On the Reichsstrasse are the American and the Russian Churches (K 15, 16).

Back the same way as far as the Hauptbahnhof and along the Wienerstrasse (the English quarter). The "All Saint's Church" (see page 44). By going down the Gellertstrasse, you reach the Grosser Garten, a large English park with many walks and pleasant avenues decorated with statues and marble groups. In August 1813 severe combats between the French and the Prussians took place here. The Palace in the centre of the Grosser Garten contains the Museum of Antiquities (P 14). Tourists are recommended to inspect this edifice. Behind the palace is a large sheet of water with swans; excellent skating in winter, with concerts. Bretschneider's and other Cafés are on or near this pond. Ten minutes to the right the irregular Carola-See (O P 15) with restaurant, boats, &c. (Skating in winter.)

A beautiful avenue (at right angles with the palace) takes you to the Zoological Garden, one of the finest in Germany;

entrance 75 Pf. In summer good concerts on Sunday; Rendez-vous of the Dresden fashionable world. Frequent exhibitions of Indians, &c. A large and comfortable concert-hall having been built, there are now also concerts in winter. Then back to the city through the Bürgerwiese (beautiful promenades) to the Georgplatz (M 13, 14) with the Kreuzschule, a celebrated old school in Gothic architecture (beautiful hall), attended once by von Weber, and by Richard Wagner; in front of the school the Körner-, Gutzkow- and Julius Otto-Monuments. Close by is the Ferdinandplatz, with the celebrated Gänsedieb-Fountain, by Diez, and in Pragerstrasse a large Exhibition of Art, with a large assortment of modern paintings, (the enterprise of Richter).

Fronting the Belvédère is the Synagogue, an edifice in oriental style designed by Semper; interior most remarkable.

The Conservatory (Royal Academy for Music) is in the Landhausstrasse. At the end of this street is the Neumarkt, with the Frauenkirche, the Monument of Frederick Augustus II by Rietschel, the Luther-Monument by Rietschel, and the Johanneum with a handsome court and gateway (the latter a splendid work of art). On the outer wall of this edifice (Augustusstrasse) a magnificent tableau in Meissen china. (See page 34.)

Crossing the Augustus bridge you reach the ### Neustadt.

Neustadt was destroyed by fire in 1685; then Augustus the Strong had the Hauptstrasse and Königstrasse laid out.

The Augustus bridge, a stone bridge dating from the 10th century, with 17 pillars and 16 arches; has disappeared and is now replaced by an interim-bridge. To left of north end, the Blockhaus. Then the Hauptstrasse ("Dresdner Linden"). On the Neustädter Marktplatz rises the imposing Monument of Augustus the Strong (looking towards Poland), cast in gilded copper by Widemann (in 1736). Two ornamental masts typify the German Empire and Saxony.

To the left are the Townhall and Dreikönigskirche (M 9); to the right hand farther on the Catholic chapel and the Albert-Theatre, with the twin Fountains by Diez.

From here a good half hour's walk takes to the Arsenal (O 5) and the immense barracks, considered the most perfect military buildings in Europe; for 15,000 soldiers.

The Königstrasse leads from the Albertplatz to the Kaiser Wilhelm-Platz with the Japanese Palace, (Royal Library) and the Palace-garden, famous for its rare exotic trees, and for roses, lilacs and thorn trees; near by is the interesting Körner-Museum. Return to Altstadt crossing the Marienbrücke.

VIEWS.

The best general views may be had from the Moreau Monument (L 18), Luisenhof and Victorialhöhe (Loschwitz), the Wolfshügel, Bismarckturm and Hohe Stein (Plauen) and "Paradies" (Zschertnitz). There are also good views from the Brühl'sche Terrasse, the bridges, the hill in the garden of the Japanese Palace, Neustadt (L 9), the Frauenkirche and Kreuzkirche towers, the Stadtgut in Räcknitz and the Waldschlösschen Terrasse.

ENVIRONS OF DRESDEN.

Dresden owes its renown not only to its various artistic and mental enjoyments but also (and perhaps more especially) to the beauty of its environs. From numerous hills, principally on the right bank of the river (Neustadt side), up-stream, the spectator enjoys an extended panorama of the city and the surrounding country.

The Waldschlösschen. From the Albertplatz through the Bautznerstrasse pass the Lincke'sches Bad, where Eduard Strauss' orchestra generally plays one week each summer, and through a shady avenue reach the Waldschlösschen, a favorite brewery, with its own restaurant, famous for its excellent beer. An English mile further on, lies the Albrechtsberg* with the Albrechtsschlösser (fine terraces down to the Elbe, and beautiful plantations).

Saloppe. By steamboat starting from Brühl'sche Terrasse (30 Pf.) or by electric railway from Waldschlösschen. The new waterworks are here. There is a restaurant, much frequented on account of its beautiful elevated situation. Not far from here is the Weisser Hirsch, a favourite summer-residence. It lies far up on the hill; has a good restaurant and hotel, from which it takes its name. Also accessible by omnibus and by electric railway from Waldschlösschen. The Water-cure Establishment &c. of Dr. Lahmann is known far beyond the German Empire.

Loschwitz. By steamboat about half an hour (35 Pf.) or by electrical railway from Schlossplatz via Blasewitz, over the suspension bridge. It is a very hilly village, on the right bank of the Elbe with many nice country seats. It was here that Schiller, while a guest of Körner, father of the poet Theodor Körner, who was born here 1791, composed the "Lay of the Bells", "Wallenstein's Lager", and "Don Carlos". (See the Schillerhäuschen on Schillerstr.) Hotel Demnitz (at the Steamboat landing). Schöne Aussicht, Restaurant Victoria-Höhe (Restaurant and Hôtel) both with charming view of the valley of the Elbe. Well recommended. Burgberg, 120 steps up the hill. Louisenhof, reached by inclined rope railway from point near the end of the electric car line.

Also a Schwebebahn (Suspension cars) unique in Saxony going up to Loschwitz-Höhe every 5 Minutes.

On the opposite (left) bank of the river is Blasewitz, a flat-lying suburb, principally of substantial residences, and with many reminiscences of Schiller (Schillergarten with the Schiller-Linden and a bust of the poet; suggestions of Schiller's Gustel von Blasewitz). A beautiful bridge unites those two much frequented resorts. It is the only one of its kind in the world, being of a special "rigid-suspension" type. Goethe-Garten.

Reached by electrical railway from Blasewitz are Tolkewitz and Laubegast on the left river bank. At the former, Donath's Neue Welt (refreshment garden with curious structures), amuses children.

Wachwitz-Höhe and Wachwitz-Grund (right bank) may be reached either by steamer from below the Brühl'sche Terrasse or by ferry-boat from Tolkewitz or by tram from Schlossplatz.

Pillnitz—Keppgrund—Hosterwitz. By steamboat or by tram from Schlossplatz about one hour and a quarter, or by rail (Haupt-Bahnhof) to Niedersedlitz (40 pf.), then  $\frac{3}{4}$  hr. afoot to Zschachwitz, and by ferry. Royal Palace in Japanese style. Strangers desirous of seeing the interior must apply to the Castellan. Very fine Conifer collection. The oldest Camelia tree in Europe, sometimes having 4000 blossoms. A lovely walk through the Friedrichsgrund leads to the Borsberg (350 m = 1150 feet) with a grand panorama. The Meixmühle makes a pleasant walk from Pillnitz.

Dohna — Schloss Weesenstein — Finkenfang Maxen — Altenberg. From the Haupt-Bahnhof by railway to Mügeln. From here the Müglitzer Strasse (about  $1\frac{1}{2}$  hours) through the village of Dohna to Schloss Weesenstein, or direct to Weesenstein narrow gage by railway with the line going to Geising in the Erzgebirge. An interesting old castle with 7 stories: stables, kitchen and cellars in the upper stories, being partly hewn out of the rocks.

Following or taking the tramway out Wienerstrasse one comes to Strehlen with a royal villa and numbers of quaint old houses (Duttler's Restaurant and Variety Theatre; Hôtel Goldene Krone), and from here a pleasant walk to Mockritz and the Gold'ne Höhe, or to Neu-Ostra and Leubnitz. Here is a Gasthof which was once a cloister (built 1288) and a 16th-century church with curious spire and an arrangement of galleries and private lodges not often seen, and worth visiting.

Räcknitz — Moreau Monument — Franzenshöhe — Bis-marcktower. From the Haupt-Bahnhof pass the American church up the Bergstrasse, and by keeping to the right reach the Moreau Monument on high ground ( $\frac{1}{2}$  hour). Inscription: "Moreau the Hero fell here at the side of Alexander, 27th of August 1813". It may also be reached by walking out Werderstrasse and bearing slightly to the right. At the end of Werderstrasse the new Lukas Church. (Trams.)

Kaitz, Prinzenhöhe, Windberg, Poisengrund, and Deuben, make a good excursion; return by rail or by tram to Dresden.

Plauen—Hoher Stein—Felsenkeller—Plauenscher Grund. From the Postplatz (foot or by tramway) through the Annen-, Falken-, and Chemnitzerstrasse pass the Feldschlösschen (brewery) to Plauen, close to which is the Plauenscher Grund, formed by high rocks (80 m = 262 feet) which afford charming views of the surrounding valleys. Here is also the Felsenkeller brewery.

Rabenauer Grund. From the Haupt-Bahnhof to Hainsberg, and by Secundär-Bahn (narrow gage line) to Rabenau. The Grund or dale is watered by the wild Weissertitz. One of the prettiest trips on this side of Dresden.

Tharandt. One station beyond Hainsberg is the charming town of Tharandt with its celebrated Forest Academy, and ruined tower. On the heights is Cotta's grave, the eminent founder of the Academy, surrounded by 80 oaks planted by himself. Heinrich's Eck. Other side of the stream, Stille Liebe. Also electric tramway, runs from Dresden to Hainsberg.

To Briessnitz, Zschoner Grund, Merbitz and Cossebaude is a delightful trip by carriage, by rail or by tram or even afoot; the latter may also be reached by rail from Haupt-Bahnhof. In cherry-blossom time the scene is fairy-like. From Cossebaude if one has gone by rail, there is time to visit Liebenecke, Osterberg, Gohlis and Amselgrund.

To Kötzschenbroda by rail or by tram and thence afoot to Paradies, Sängerhöhe and so on to Weintraube and thence home by rail or by tram is an especially delightful trip in peach blossom time.

Moritzburg by rail from Haupt- or Neustädter Bahnhof to Radebeul, where change is made to Secundär-Bahn (narrow gage railway). Tram to Weisses Ross. Celebrated hunting castle, built by the Elector Maurice (1542). Interesting collections. Deer, wild boars and many kinds of ornamental pheasants. The feeding of the former, Sunday afternoons, brings crowds of spectators, especially in the spring, when the young wild swine are to be seen in great number. Beautiful walks. The cuckoo and the nightingale are to be heard.

Through the Dresdner Heide the riding is good and the walking also fair. (One must avoid the target ranges.) The Heidemühle is worth a visit. The Heide, which covers 15,000 acres, has a very beneficial effect in sheltering Dresden in winter.

Augustusbad, between Dresden and Radeberg, is a charming retreat; there are chalybeate springs, mud-baths, &c. One can walk for 17 miles in the forest.

By rail to Niedersedlitz from there by the new electric tram to the charming Lockwitzgrund and its surroundings. One may also take the tram from Dresden direct over Laubegast—Niedersedlitz.

Gross-Sedlitz. Garden with terraces, orangery, &c., in the Versailles style. Cars (25 min.) or boat (2 hrs.) to Heidenau; then 20 minutes by foot. Not so much visited as it deserves.

Stolpen. Interesting castle, high up on a mountain of basalt columns; its tower was for years the prison of Countess Cosel. Wonderful well, about 300 ft. deep, excavated by fire. Fine view. On the line Neustadt-Dürrröhrsdorf; to be reached either via Pirna or via Arnsdorf. Half an hour from station. Takes a day; worth it.

Meissen. By rail  $\frac{1}{2}$  to  $\frac{3}{4}$  hour. See the Albrechtsburg, the Cathedral, and the Royal Porcelain factory where the famous Meissen china is made. A long half day. (By boat, from near Bellevue-Hotel,  $1\frac{3}{4}$  hours downstream,  $2\frac{3}{4}$  hours up.)

Bastei, Prebischtor, Edmundsklamm and other points in the Saxon and Bohemian Switzerland. (See "Colliers's Guide to Saxon Switzerland" for detailed information concerning these charming excursions.)

WEIGHTS, MEASURES, &c. (Gewichte, Maasse, &c.).

The Kilogram is, practically 2.2 lb. av.; the German pound 1.1 lb. av. or 17.6 ounces. An English pound is 0.453 Kilogram.

The Kilometer is practically  $\frac{5}{8}$  English (not German) mile. An English mile is about 1.6 Kilometers.

The Meter is about 39.4 English (not Saxon) inches or 3.28 (say  $3\frac{1}{4}$ ) English feet, or 1.09 (say  $1\frac{1}{10}$ ) English yards. An English foot is 0.305 meter. An English yard is 0.914 meter.

Ordinary walking on a level on good ground is 3 miles or 4.8 (say  $4\frac{3}{4}$ ) kilometers; that is, it would take 20 minutes to walk a mile, or  $12\frac{1}{2}$  minutes to walk a kilometer. On hills and bad roads it takes longer; usually 16 minutes per kilometer are reckoned.

A Mandel is 15; a Shock is 60 (in counting eggs).

TIME (Zeitberechnung).

Strangers unaccustomed to German time-reckoning should remember that halb acht ( $\frac{1}{2}8$ ) does not mean 8.30 but 7.30; ein viertel neun ( $\frac{1}{4}9$ ) is not a quarter either before or past nine, but a quarter past eight. Railway time here is the Middle European or Görlitz standard. This is given each noon from a small bell on the Zwinger. It is 5 m.  $0\frac{1}{2}$  sec. faster than Dresden local time.

THERMOMETERS.

In Saxony the Réaumur thermometer is used. By this scale water freezes at  $0^{\circ}$  and boils at  $80^{\circ}$  instead of at  $32^{\circ}$  and  $212^{\circ}$  respectively as in the Fahrenheit, or  $0^{\circ}$  and  $100^{\circ}$  as in the Centigrade. The following approximate comparative scale may be of use.

	Fahrenheit.	Réaumur.	Centigrade.
Snow and salt	0°	—14 <sup>1/4</sup> <sup>0</sup>	—17.77°
	14°	—8° <sup>4</sup>	—10°
Ice	32°	0°	0°
	50°	+8°	+10°
	54°	10°	12 <sup>1/4</sup> <sup>0</sup>
	77°	20°	25° <sup>4</sup>
	100°	30°	37 <sup>3/4</sup> <sup>0</sup>
	122°	40°	50° <sup>4</sup>
	144 <sup>1/2</sup> <sup>0</sup>	50°	62 <sup>1/2</sup> <sup>0</sup>
	167°	60°	75° <sup>2</sup>
Water Boils	212°	80°	100°

Each Fahrenheit degree is  $\frac{4}{9}$  deg. Réaum. or  $\frac{5}{9}$  deg. Cent. Each deg. R. is  $\frac{9}{4}$  deg. F. or  $\frac{5}{4}$  deg. C. Each deg. C. is  $\frac{4}{9}$  deg. F. or  $\frac{4}{5}$  deg. R. But the starting points or zeros are at the temperature of ice for R. and C., and of ice and salt for F.

"DRESDEN" CHINA.

All of the so-called "Dresden" (properly "Royal Saxon") China is made in Meissen or elsewhere, although much porcelain from Meissen, Berlin, and Limoges is here decorated by Dresden artist-artisans. The Royal Porcelain Factory at Meissen has show-rooms and sale-rooms on Schlossstrasse in Dresden, opposite the royal palace, and visitors can purchase here to the same advantage as in Meissen. The true Meissen China has 2 crossed swords.

RESIDENCE.

Those living longer than 3 months here must notify the police at the Einwohneramt before the 3 months are up, and take out an Einwohnerschein (4 M.).

TAXES (Steuern).

Foreigners living here up to one year continuously or three years with interruptions, need not pay income tax (unless they carry on business). At the end of the terms mentioned they must pay a tax according to their income or expenditure in Dresden, whichever is the greater. In case of dispute, apply to your Consul (in office hours only).

There is also local taxation of all foreigners living here more than three months, for the Protestant church and school; rate based on income, or expenditure in Dresden, whichever is the greater.

MONEY (Geld).

There are 100, 50, 20, 10 and 5-mark* notes, all of different sizes; 20 and 10 mark gold pieces; five, three, two and one-mark silver pieces and 50 Pf. silver pieces; then 25, 10 and 5 Pf. nickel and 2 and 1 Pf. copper coins. The 50 Pf. and the 10 Pf. pieces are easily mistaken one for the other; the 50 Pf. is however a trifle smaller and thinner, and has milled edges. The 10 Pf. piece is called by old-fashioned people a "groschen".

A mark is, independent of daily fluctuations,  $23\frac{1}{5}$  U. S cents, and practically an English shilling. A thousand marks = \$ 238 or say a trifle under £ 50

An American dollar is practically 4.25 marks, independent of daily fluctuations.

The pfennig is half a farthing or a quarter of a cent.

Hotel porters are always willing to change money for guests, but they can not give so much as the banks or exchange offices.

Storekeepers are not compelled to take other than German money. The free intercirculation of coins of the various Latin countries, France, Belgium, Italy, &c., does not apply to Germany.

In going to Bohemian Switzerland, take some Austrian small money with you.
